

Essay:

Quaid-e-Azam

"A leader is the one who knows the way, goes the way, and shows
the way..."

~John C. Maxwell

Great leaders are special people who guide nations towards freedom, justice, and progress. They are remembered for their vision, courage and strong will. Among the most remarkable leaders of the modern era, Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah holds a high place. He was a man of principle, a symbol of unity and a source of hope for the Muslims of sub-continent.

"Men like Jinnah are rarely born."

~Lord Pethick-Lawrence

Quaid-e-Azam, whose title means "The Great Leader", is honoured as the founder of Pakistan. He was born on 25th December 1876 in Karachi. His father, Jinnah Poonja, was a respected and successful merchant.

Quaid got his early education at "Sindh Madrasa-tul-Islam" and later went to the Christian Mission School. In 1892, at the age of sixteen, he went to England to continue his studies. He joined the famous Lincoln's Inn in London to study law. After completing his degree, he returned to Karachi in 1896 and began working as a barrister in Bombay, where he soon became known for his sharp mind and clear speech.

"Work, work and work and we are bound to success."

~Muhammad Ali Jinnah

At first Jinnah joined the "Indian National Congress" with the aim of uniting Hindus and Muslims to gain independence from British rule, he soon realised that Hindu leaders were not willing to protect the political and cultural rights of Muslims. In 1913, he joined the All-India Muslim League, seeing the need for a separate political group to speak for the Muslims of sub-continent.

Seeing the Hindu majority's control in Politics, Jinnah became sure that the Muslims of the sub-continent could only protect their identity, religion, and traditions through their own political party. Under his strong leadership, the All-India Muslim League grew into a powerful voice for the Muslim community. He clearly explained that Hindus and Muslims were two separate nations with differences that could not be solved, and therefore could not live together under one government.

"Hindus and Muslims are two major nations by any definition or test of a nation."

~Muhammad Ali Jinnah

Jinnah bravely stood against both the British rulers and the Hindu majority, inspiring the millions of Muslims & through his speeches, vision, and determination. Under his guidance, the Muslim League passed the Historic Pakistan Resolution on 23rd March 1940 in Lahore, officially asking for a separate homeland for Muslims. Despite many political challenges, Jinnah saved Muslims and stayed firm and on 14th August 1947, Pakistan became an independent country.

After independence, Jinnah became Pakistan's first Governor-General. Even though his health was getting weaker, he worked hard to build the foundations of the new country. He stressed the principles of unity, faith, and discipline, and worked to make Pakistan strong on the values of justice, equality and democracy.

"There is no power on Earth that can undo Pakistan."

~ Muhammad Ali Jinnah

Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah died on 11th September 1948 in Karachi, just over a year after the creation of Pakistan. His resting place, the Mazar-e-Quaid in Karachi, stands as a symbol of his lasting legacy. He is remembered not only as the founder of Pakistan but also as a leader whose honesty and vision continue to inspire generations.

~ Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us,
Footprints on the sands of time.
